DR. KING BARES RECORDS TO SHOW CUSTOMS REFORM UNDER WAY BEFORE STEVENS CHARGES

Conservative Accusations Based on Confidential Report Which Government Was Securing to Clean up Customs Department Itself, Former Minister Proves; Tories Killed Useful Legislation, He Declares, But Liberals Will Reintroduce it, if Returned.

The inside story of the customs inquiry at Ottawa was told to the Nanaimo Liberal Convention in Duncan yesterday by Hon. J. H. King, Minister of Public Works in the Mackenzie King Government, who gave the lie direct to Conservative versions of this celebrated investigation. In a careful review of the inquiry, supported by actual records of the House of Commons, Dr. King showed that the King Government had been in the midst of "cleaning up" the Customs Department when Conservatives started to attack it; that Conservative charges had been based on confidential information which the Government itself had secured in its own investigations into the conduct of the department; and that the Mackenzie King Government did not try to reform the Customs Department until it had given the lie to the charges.

PEOPLE SAVE $117,000,000 ON TAX CUTS

Hon. J. H. King Discusses Election Issues With Victoria Liberals

Hon. J. H. King, Minister of Public Works in the Mackenzie King Government, returned from the Nanaimo nominating convention at Duncan last evening, and at a meeting of Victoria Liberals at Liberal Headquarters discussed the political and election situations.

Dr. King brought applause when he referred to the $117,000,000 in savings which has been taken off the shoulders of the people through the big reductions made by the Robb budget of the Liberal Government in the income tax, by the return to penny postage and the cut in automobile prices as a result of the reduction in duties and excise.

Mr. Meighen, a Canadian war policy of holding a general election on the question of Canada's entrance into war before any step was taken by the Government, was referred to by Dr. King, who said that Mr. Meighen had adopted such a policy with the idea of beguiling the French-Canadians.

As for the constitutional issue, Dr. King said that the Governor-General had acted as he did with the idea of saving Canada from another general election but the responsibility for what had happened had to be borne by Mr. Meighen, who said that he could make Parliament function under himself, but when called upon and given his opportunity fell.

Savannah, Ga., July 29.—High seas and wind of increasing intensity along the Georgia coast early to-day presaged the advent of the tropical hurricane which, thundering up the Florida coast since Monday, has left damage and destruction to shipping, property and communication lines which may run into millions of dollars.

A full in the wind, the usual indication of an approaching storm, was reported at many points along the Georgia coast early to-day.

Heavy seas, rolling in on the highest tides of several years, pounded at the sea islands along the Georgia and upper Florida coast. Sudden squalls and torrential rains were reported with five inches of rain last night.

Trees were uprooted on St. Simons Island and the foundations of several cottages were wrecked. The island was visited early yesterday by a messenger who awakened resort visitors and informed them that a hurricane would reach the island within a short time. Hundreds of persons, many of them thinly clad, fled to the beach.

The greatest property damage was reported at Palm Beach and West Palm Beach, where shipping, buildings and a bridge across Lake Worth were wrecked with an estimated property loss of over $1,000,000.

GREAT CROWD AT AUCTION SALE OF REVERTED LANDS

Victoria's second auction sale of reverted properties opened before a packed audience of local and visiting bidders in a large tent opposite the Crystal Garden at 2 o'clock to-day.

Charles S. Austin, in command of the hammer, predicted that most of the 172 properties to be advanced by the city for the unreserved sale would pass into private hands by this evening.

"We will keep going right ahead now that we have started," the auctioneer told his hearers. "Never mind about supper, this is more important than eating anyway."

If a second session is necessary to finish the sale it will be held at the same place on Saturday at 2 p.m. The auctioneer predicted to-day that the city lands department would be able to hold a further session.

Bidding opened to-day with a quiet but persistent tone, with local and foreign capital equally balanced. By quick changes from business to residential property the auctioneer fanned bidding into a rising volume which sent some properties across the counter at figures not far below their former list price.

FORTY PARCELS
Forty parcels of semi-business property in the close in area and the balance in the picturesque subdivisions of the Hollywood district comprise the land to be sold. Sixteen parcels on Pandora Avenue are the central feature of interest in the sale, and spirited bidding was evidenced in the offering of the first of this kind.

Long before the sale opened at 2 p.m. crowds began to gather, while auction charts were set out on every sidewalk and the city lands department had the auctioneer in keeping a check on the trading of the afternoon.

The easy terms offered by the city have attracted the widest interest. For $10,000-bidders at the auction sale can take in properties valued at $100,000 on a ten per cent cash payment down and the balance on exceptionally easy payments.

The second payment due on the auction properties falls on September 1, when fifteen per cent of the purchase price must be met. The second installment falls in February of 1927, and at half-yearly intervals after that. Six per cent is charged on the balance remaining, on an agreement of sale. The auctioneer's fee of 10 applies equally to all properties, irrespective of their price.

BRINGING MORE
From the first hour of the sale it became evident city lands were bringing more this year than last, when the first auction sale was staged under the same management. Properties with buildings on them brought prices which ran close to the list price on the city's books, and not far under the full assessed value of the land.

Out-of-town representation has increased tenfold this year, and much of the bidding in the downtown area was boosted up through competition from this source. The large crowd under the tent in itself attracted attention, and visitors who were strolling past stepped in only to become interested in the scene. Some emerged later the possessors of property in a city where they had first set foot less than twenty-four hours before.

REVOLT THREAT IN NICARAGUA
Managua, July 29.—The Nicaraguan Government is sending troops to strengthen the garrisons of Managua and Estelí in fear of another Liberal uprising.

POLICE OF U. S. SEEKING THREE RUM LEADERS

Score of People in Ontario Killed by Poison Liquor Smuggled Across From New York State; Deaths in Buffalo Region Bring Total to Forty-four; Analysts Told Bootleggers Liquid Was Poisonous.

Buffalo, N.Y., July 29.—A nation-wide search was instituted to-day for three men, said to be members of the higher-up coterie sought by the authorities in connection with the sale of wood alcohol in liquor.

The deathlist in the western part of New York State and the Toronto-Niagara region of Ontario now stands at forty-four, James town, N.Y., having reported four deaths last night.

The poison liquor which caused the deaths in Ontario is believed to have been smuggled across from this state.

The men sought are alleged by the police to have known the liquor was poisonous when they sold it. Their names as revealed by Buffalo authorities are David Goldberg and Nate Sapowich of Buffalo and Davey Burden of New York. James C. Voelker of Buffalo already is under arrest.

Search for the trio is the direct outcome of sworn statements made to police heads by John J. Neherowicz of Buffalo and Olf Reuter of Lackawanna, members of a firm conducting a testing laboratory here. The chemists said they were besieged with analysis requests for a week prior to the first fatality here from lethal liquor. Some of the tests were made before the very eyes of the alcohol vendors. Among those who brought in samples were James C. Voelker, the chemists explained. They furnished him with a report condemning the alcohol.

Despite the fact that all the samples examined by the chemists were pronounced poisonous, the vendors of the fatal liquor sold the stuff.

A first-degree murder indictment will be sought.

The police chief said he was certain one or more of the alcohol vendors sent drums of condemned alcohol into Canada.

The deaths in Ontario numbered about a score.

TO TELL WHOLE STORY
Buffalo, July 29.—Attorneys defending James Voelker, alleged poison liquor distributor, says he will tell all he knows about the ramifications of the ring with which he did business. The death toll resulting from the sale of 2,500 gallons of bad alcohol said to have been shipped here from New York State, grain alcohol has mounted to 44.

Major Eugene C. Roberts Jr., prohibition administrator, made it known Voelker and stated in a partial confession he had sold 400 gallons of the poisonous shipment and that he had 100 gallons still in his possession when he learned it was poisonous and destroyed it.

INNOCENT VICTIM
Ernest W. McIntyre, counsel for Voelker, said his client was the innocent victim of those who had sold him the bad liquor.

Voelker yesterday pleaded not guilty to a charge of murder. He was remanded to jail without bail.

Meanwhile authorities announced they knew the identity of two "high-rollers" in New York City from whom Voelker purchased the alcohol. The said arrests they expected to make momentarily might involve members of the riot-suppressing New York and part of Ontario with illicit liquor.

Nearly thirty arrests have been made in Buffalo, Lockport and Canadian border cities since the investigation got under way.

EXPLOSION KILLED TWO IN ONTARIO
Another Oshawa Auto Workman is Believed to be Dying

Oshawa, Ont., July 29.—Two men were instantly killed and a third is believed to be dying as the result of an explosion in the plant of the General Motors Corporation here just before noon to-day and two others are in the Oshawa General Hospital in a critical condition.

One of those killed has been identified as Alex. McNab, twenty-two, of this city.

The explosion was caused by the touching of an acetylene torch to a gasoline tank which was being placed in readiness for use. It contained no gasoline, but was partly filled with water.

It is believed fumes from the gasoline which previously had been in it were sufficient to cause the explosion when the flame from the torch touched it.

The bodies of the two men killed were blown to pieces.

FRUIT MEN OF B.C. HOPING FOR RAIN

Vancouver, July 29.—Orchards in some parts of the mainland of British Columbia are said to be suffering from the hot weather, and rain is badly needed. It is stated the shortage of water may reduce early estimates. Reports also indicate the apple crop may show a percentage of low-grade fruit in some places, due to various causes, including neglect of proper thinning at the right time.

On the lower mainland, the raspberry and loganberry season is over, but blackberries are coming in and will continue for some time, it is reported. Early plums are coming in freely and there will be a plentiful supply in the course of the next couple of weeks. Prunes are sizing well, and indicate a large crop. Local pears are comparatively clean and promise a heavy yield. They are expected to be ready for market about the end of the first week in August. Early apples are finding a ready sale. Some are rather small, but the majority are of fair size, it is stated.

Kelowna reports fruit is of good size for the season, and general orchards are looking well. Early apples and peach plums are now being shipped. In Penticton the crop of apricots and early apples promises to be large and of good quality. In Summerland, apples are now moving, and Favorite and Bartlett varieties are maturing rapidly.

The raspberry crop at Kootenay and Arrow Lakes has been heavy and of fine quality. The crop is expected to be cleaned up by the end of the month.

The loss is said to be fully covered by insurance. Two Stutz sedans owned by citizens were badly damaged. The third car was owned by the motor company.

STRANGE CREATURE WAS SEEN IN LAKE

Woman and Man Support
Stories of Okanagan Sea
Serpent

Vernon, B.C., July 29.—Stories about the existence of a monster sea serpent in Lake Okanagan gained further support to-day as positive evidence was forthcoming from two different sources that the reptile has been seen disappearing in the sunshine less than 100 feet from a beach near here.

The presence of the serpent was first noticed by Mrs. Jervis, a visitor here from Kelowna. She was sitting near the wharf at Cameron's Point when there was a sudden commotion in the water. The woman states that she saw the slimy snake-like form describing three distinct arcs.

"It looked something like portions of three automobile wheels," Mrs. Jervis said.

H. C. Dalziel, a resident at Cameron's Point, was attracted by the sighting in the lake. He corroborated the woman's story, adding that both had shouted to see if the monster would raise its head out of the water. Instead of doing that, the serpent submerged and disappeared.

"Let, therefore, each ask his own soul the result of his work," he said. The meeting place of the conference resembles an old-fashioned camp meeting. It covers an area of fifty acres, with tents of all sizes varying in sleeping accommodations of from two to fifty each. Each night there is singing around the camp fire, while Krishnamurti chants in Sanskrit.

REPORT EXPLAINED BY WALTER DUNCAN

After Customs Investigation
in Montreal He Retained
Woman's Diary

Montreal, July 29.—The Montreal Daily Star published the following special dispatch from Ottawa:

"In view of the discussion on the political platform and in the newspaper as to the Duncan report on investigations into the Customs Department, and the conflicting allegations that are made, Inspector Walter Duncan, special investigator, was asked to-day for a clarifying statement as to whether anything was suppressed, and if so, what it was."

"I was detailed," he said, to make an investigation into the administration of the customs service in Montreal and that district, and I did so. I seized papers and documents in the office of J. E. A. Bisalloy, chief preventive officer of the district, and I summoned and examined on oath officials who, I thought, were in a position to throw light on the question. The evidence was taken and transcribed. I submitted first an interim report and afterward a fuller report. Both of these reports were produced before the committee of the House that investigated the Customs Department and were read into the record of the inquiry. Nothing contained was suppressed or deleted, but the evidence, comprising 219 pages, upon which the reports were based, were not read into the record, although it was tabled in the House. The exhibits were also tabled."

"What I did not produce before the committee and what was not published was a memorandum book of a certain woman. The notes in the book were in shorthand. I had them extended."

"They referred mainly to the private life and personal relations of this woman rather than bearing upon the Customs Department."

"As I stated, the evidence I took in Montreal is not a part of the committee's record, but it was produced and tabled in the House."

"What all the clamor is about, I surmise, is the diary of the woman. I have it in my possession. I did not submit it to the committee because it dealt with the personal affairs of this woman rather than with what I was investigating."

GETTING BETTER ALL THE TIME

SOME OF THE BEST NEWS-WHICH THE people of Canada have received during the last twelve months has come from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics at Ottawa. Month after month trade figures and employment figures have been convincingly illustrative of the manner in which this country has been progressing economically. The following brief summary of conditions in May, issued by Mr. R. H. Coats, chief of the General Statistics Branch for Canada, should be read by all Canadians with more than ordinary interest:

According to the outstanding factors generally regarded as significant, business activity in Canada during May was at a higher level than in previous months of the present year, a gratifying conclusion when the generally active conditions prevailing in earlier months are kept in mind. The brightest spot in the current Canadian economic situation is the activity of the construction industry, the contracts awarded during May being a record for all time. The movement of revenue freight, as indicated by carloadings, was greatly accelerated during the month, being 11 per cent greater than in May, 1925. The primary iron and steel industry, favored by rail orders, operated in May at a higher level than in the previous months of the year. The index of industrial employment at June 1 was higher than in any month since 1920.

What Mr. Coats says has been said in extended form by railway presidents, bank executives, mortgage company managers, building contractors, automobile salesmen, and many men prominent in the public eye. To these may be added the statement which Sir Frederick Williams Taylor, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, made to the press in Winnipeg on his arrival there yesterday. Here is a part of it:

Canada's position to-day is a tribute to her recuperative powers. Similar conditions here with those of any other country which participated in the war from the very first, and you will realize how fortunate we are. We still have a heavy load of taxation to carry, but like Great Britain, we are one of the very few countries which are meeting their war obligations fully and unreservedly. Not only that, but we are improving our condition every day. During the current year there has been a noticeable betterment in domestic business, and the expansion of our export trade, with an increasing balance in our favor, is a tribute to the energy and enterprise with which we as a people are putting our house in order.

In this nation-wide progress British Columbia is sharing to a very considerable extent. Building activity during the last twelve months has been marked. Homes have gone up in Vancouver and in Victoria in greater numbers than for many a year and there is no surer guarantee of prosperity than this.

VICTORIA REAL ESTATE

THERE IS EVERY INDICATION THAT the auction of city lots which is being held this afternoon will be as popular as the first sale by this method. Undoubtedly more interest is being manifested in Victoria real estate just now than at any other time during the last ten years. The encouraging feature of that interest, moreover, is the fact that people from afar have begun to realize what this community has to offer by way of investment in real property.

Nor are people from California and other points in the United States taking a stake in this locality because they have been invited to do so or merely because we have a pleasing climate and facilities for recreation. In practically every instance it is a straight business proposition, entered into after careful investigation of the Island. Victorians can stimulate this revival by showing their own faith in the city and its future.

If outsiders are persuaded that real estate values here are bound to increase during the next twelve months, our own citizens ought to consider what advantage they are going to get out of it.

WOOD ALCOHOL VICTIMS

EIGHTEEN PEOPLE IN ONTARIO AND twenty-three in New York state near the Niagara frontier have died from alcoholic poisoning after imbibing stuff made of wood alcohol.

It has been shown that the liquor was smuggled into Ontario from Buffalo last week. We may expect, therefore, that Hon. C. H. Boivin, former Minister of Customs, will put some very pertinent and embarrassing questions to Hon. H. H. Stevens, present Minister of Customs.

Mr. Stevens has been the head of the Department of Customs for a month. He declared in Toronto in a speech which every newspaper in Canada blazed across its front page that he was going to "wage war to the knife on liquor smuggling." He announced that mounted police had been stationed along the border. Yet within three weeks of the uttering of these words, poisoned liquor in large quantities was smuggled across the border and eighteen people in Ontario died from the effects of drinking it.

Mr. Stevens, when in opposition in the House, held that Mr. Boivin as head of the Department, and through him, the Government, was responsible for the smuggling which the parliamentary inquiry disclosed had taken place, no matter how long it had been going on. The facts that neither the Minister nor his colleagues knew anything about it, and that when it came to their attention they employed Detective Duncan to probe the situation to the utmost, were not admitted by Mr. Stevens to be worth considering.

It is just as proper for Mr. Boivin now to hold Mr. Stevens and, through him, the Meighen Government, responsible for the smuggling of the poisoned liquor which already has destroyed eighteen Canadian lives. If this is the way Mr. Stevens is going to "wage war to the knife" on liquor smuggling, to quote his own words, then heaven help the guileless victims on both sides of the international boundary.

THE ARTFUL DODGER

GEORGETOWN, P.E.I., CONSERVATIVES last night got a little insight into Mr. Meighen's "stable protective policy." The party leader told them that he did not mean a high tariff. He thought it was infinitely better to keep it steady rather than that it should go incessantly up and down. In fact he said the Conservative party did not preach and had not preached a high tariff within his memory.

Mr. Meighen must have had his tongue in his cheek all the time he was saying this. In Vancouver on October 7, 1925, he said: "CANADA SHOULD PROFIT BY THE LESSON OF THE UNITED STATES, WHICH HAS PUT ITS TARIFF WALL UP FIFTY PER CENT." This is the real Mr. Meighen. He can talk "stable protection" until he is blue in the face; but he knows that one of the first things he would do in office would be to put back the old scale of duties which existed before the Mackenzie King Government reduced them and gave the benefit to the Canadian people. The Prime Minister is pledged to his "brick for brick" and "stone for stone" policy which he called in 1925 "the lesson of the United States."

Every time Mr. Meighen plays with words in discussing the tariff he knows he is merely begging the question. He is not advocating high customs duties in this election. He knows that the prosperity which he said a high tariff would produce has been produced under the lower tariff policies of Mr. King. And he knows the people know it also. But he is the high protectionist now that he always was. His Cabinet is made up for the most part of men who used to call for a tariff wall as "high as Haman's gallows."

Query: Does Mr. Meighen prefer the "white flag of secession" to a Canadian flag symbolizing Canada's association with the United Kingdom?

Mr. Meighen is determined to wave some flag in this election. First it was the Union Jack. Now it is the "white flag of secession." No doubt it will be the red flag when he reaches some Socialist centre. The truth is that he is willing to wave anything to get into office, and as his party sticks to his leadership we presume it does not care very much what kind of a flag he waves.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL ISSUE

(Extract Mr. Mackenzie King's Ottawa Speech)

The first question I should like to ask you is, was I right or wrong in the advice I tendered His Excellency, in saying that dissolution was necessary and inevitable? If, on Monday, I was wrong in advising dissolution, as the only solution of the existing situation, why was the same advice considered sound when coming from Mr. Meighen on Friday of the same week?

The second question I should like to ask is whether I was right or wrong in stating to His Excellency that if, as Prime Minister, I could not carry on in a manner befitting the honor and dignity of Parliament under conditions as they existed in the House of Commons, that neither Mr. Meighen or any other member of the House could? If I was wrong, why did Mr. Meighen's Government not last longer than two days and a half, and why did Mr. Meighen end the session in such a summary fashion, not even waiting to arrange for a formal prorogation?

I think I do full justice to His Excellency when I say that he conceived it to be his duty in the circumstances of the late Parliament to act as a sort of umpire between the political parties in Canada. Indeed, I think I use His Excellency's own words when I say that he held the view that I had had a chance to govern and that Mr. Meighen had not been given a chance of trying to govern or saying that he could not do so, and that all reasonable expedients should be tried before resorting to another election.

Holding this view and believing the prerogative of dissolution was his to exercise, His Excellency was unwilling at the time to grant a dissolution. I took the position which I have mentioned here to-night, that Mr. Meighen's chances to govern had all been quite as good as my own, that throughout the session the House of Commons had consistently declined to give him its confidence to any ministry he might attempt to form. That as to which political party had the right to govern, that was a matter which as I had pointed out after the last general election, it was for Parliament to decide, if Parliament were in a position to do so; that when Parliament ceased to be in a position to make a satisfactory decision as to which party should govern, it was then for the people to decide.

In neither case, I maintain, was it a duty or a responsibility of the Governor-General to make the decision. I stated that in my humble opinion it was not for the crown or its representative to be concerned with the differences of political parties, and that the prerogative of dissolution, like other prerogatives of the crown, had come under British practice to be exercised by the Sovereign on advice of his Prime Minister. It was for the crown advisor to say whether or not dissolution was necessary and for the crown's advisor to take the responsibility of the advice tendered. Once a dissolution was granted, the people would soon say whether, in the circumstances, the advice tendered was or was not in accord with their wishes.

In a word, the position I took was that in Canada, the relation of Prime Minister to Governor-General is the same in all essential respects as that of prime minister to the King in Great Britain.

Do You Mean What You Say?

The Register and Tribune Syndicate, Des Moines

"OUT OF SORTS"

This is a technical phrase in the printing trade but it is popularly used in referring to one who is mentally disturbed. "Sorts" are the different sizes and kinds of type used by compositors. When the printer runs out of "sorts" the composition of the particular piece of work at hand must be suspended until more are obtained. Thus a person indisposed for work is said to be "out of sorts."

Canadian Questions and Answers

ONTARIO'S GOLD PRODUCTION

Q.—What is Ontario's gold production?

A.—By the end of June, 1926, the output from the gold mines of Northern Ontario crossed the $500,000 mark. All but $100,000 of this has been turned out since 1909. Production in 1911 was only $42,037, and it was not until 1912 that important headway was made. In 1917 it stood at over $1,000,000, and had risen to over $14,000,000 in 1921. The ladder of growth since that time has been spectacular, the records for 1923 showing an output of over $20,000,000, with 1924 output reaching over $25,000,000, the production reaching over $30,000,000 in 1925. Great as are these records of the past, the outlook is favorable for even greater progress in the future.

FOX PEDIGREES

Q.—What is the number of registered fox pedigrees?

A.—According to the latest returns there are 46,900 fox pedigrees registered with the Canadian National Livestock Records. In 1919 the first year for recording foxes only 805 pedigrees were registered. By 1925 the pedigrees registered had increased to 46,900. The following are the pedigrees registered in 1925: British Columbia, 534; Quebec, 1,082; New Brunswick, 4,475; Nova Scotia, 1,492; and Prince Edward Island, 29,844.

DEEP-DYED TORY

To the Editor:—I find that in Victoria we have a twentieth century Rip Van Winkle of the person of Mr. C. F. Moriarty. May I ask is this the same gentleman who was reported in the Times-making a speech on a Liberal platform, and who repudiated the report dealing with Labor? Has he just awakened to the fact that I am a Conservative? Why surely this is common knowledge, that I have been a member of the Conservative party since within a few months of my arrival in Canada. I have never blown hot and cold on the subject of my political faith. I have never attempted to make trade or friends by denying it. Did he hurt Mr. Editor at my comment on your article dealing with the customs scandal? I believe he carries on his work in the Times Building, and no doubt would naturally resent my action.

But what he hopes to gain by assuming a Rip Van Winkle attitude about my political convictions, (of which I am not at all ashamed) I am at a loss to understand, and can only explain it by the instigation he seemingly received to write the letter he did.

JOHN DAY,

THE REALITY OF SIN

To the Editor:—In a sermon delivered in the Metropolitan United Church, as reported in your issue of July 19, the speaker says, "Christian Science denies the reality of sin." While this is true, that isolated statement, given without any of its corollaries from Mrs. Eddy's writings, is hardly just to Christian Science, either as a philosophy or a religion, although, in the present instance I am sure the implied injustice was not intentional.

The fact that all the activities of the Christian Science movement, its periodicals, literature, church services, its very existence, are devoted to the redemption of mankind from sin, should prove that such statements as that given by the present speaker mean vastly more than they appear to the casual reader; and that vaster meaning has some elucidation in the well-known fact that sinners are constantly being redeemed through the ministry of Christian Science.

The human experience of sin is the result of error, not of truth, and not more real or true than any other mistake. Evil was not put into human consciousness by God, and Christian Science being not a teaching there is another Greater or Cause. St. John describes Satan as a deceiver, which would imply that his temptations or suggestions have been false from the beginning.

To the sinner, the victim of Satan's deceptions, Christian Science brings the awakening recognition that man

Kirk's Wellington 139

Is the son of God, and is therefore not the servant of sin nor under its dominion. It does not encourage mortals to ignore their sinful tendencies, but to find their satisfaction in serving God; and sin disobeyed thus, as without divine sanction, is found to be literally without substance or reality.

What Really Happened At Ottawa

From The Toronto Star

When Mr. King visited the Governor-General and advised a dissolution, he had been Premier of Canada for four and a half years, and had not once been defeated in the House. It is argued, however, that he was about to be. The House had been discussing a committee report on the smuggling enquiry, and the primary votes had indicated a loss of Progressive support.

But even if Mr. King was about to suffer an adverse vote, two facts are surely beyond dispute. First, that it was not the function of the Governor-General to act upon a guess as to what was about to happen; second, that even if the defeat had already been decided, it would still have been the duty of the Governor-General to take the advice of the Premier, Mr. King, as to the course then to be followed. That is, it would have been his duty to grant a dissolution if Mr. King, after an adverse vote, had asked for it. If, as a matter of fact, grant of dissolution to a defeated premier (a premier of his own making) only a few days later.

On being refused a dissolution on being placed in a position of subservience to the Governor-General's personal opinions—Mr. King resigned. His excellent made Mr. Meighen premier in Mr. King's stead. Mr. Meighen formed a shadow cabinet which attempted to carry on, but was defeated after three days; the House for attempting to govern illegally. The defeated premier of this three-day cabinet then went to the Governor-General and was granted the dissolution which had been refused to a four and a half year premier who had yet to suffer a defeat.

This principle—that the crown shall be guided by the advice of the ministry—has held good in England for over a century. The King, it is on all hands admitted, would not think of refusing dissolution to his first minister as Lord Byng refused to do to Mr. King, while Prime Minister.

The King must stand aloof from all party rivalries if his name is to be kept out of the disputes. He must have the support of all parties because he is the protagonist of none. He is there for life, and when he dies another of his house succeeds him automatically to the throne. He and his are not umpires. The King invariably takes his advice from the ministry of the day.

That is the duty of the King of England. It should also be true of his representative in Canada. The identity of this representative changes an enduring crown; he is in Canada, the crown. The fact that he is here for only a short period makes it all the more necessary that he should faithfully reflect the attitude of the monarchy which he represents.

If on the other hand, he is to assume in Canada a prerogative which the King in England does not have, he is to follow his own judgment in Canadian politics and act upon his own preferences. He is at once a danger which must be obvious to all. For if it lies with the scope of a Canadian Governor-General to favor one premier at the expense of another, it will not be unusual if ministers thus favored should in turn consider the preferences of the Governor-General in forming their ministries. The result would be that a governor might have a whole ministry of his own choosing, or at any rate to his own liking, and subservient to his wishes. As soon as that happens, self-government is lost, and Canada reverts to government by governor.

FINANCE BILL IN FRANCE APPROVED

Committee Sends the New Cabinet's Measure to the Chamber For Vote

Paris, July 29.—The finance committee of the Chamber of Deputies, after considering Premier Poincaré's finance bill article by article, approved it as a whole this afternoon. The vote, which was taken after the Premier had again expounded his programme, was nineteen to thirteen, with one abstention.

The committee voted to incorporate in the bill a clause increasing the annual salaries of deputies from 27,000 francs ($875) to 40,000 francs ($1,125).

The Cabinet to-day approved a bill to be introduced in the Chamber tomorrow by the Minister of Commerce, the purpose of which is to safeguard the country's wheat supply. The details of the measure are being withheld.

CHANNEL LOGGING COMPANY PHASED IN ASSIGNMENT

Counter Application For Petition in Bankruptcy Came Too Late, Rules Courts

The authorized assignment of the Channel Logging Company, a corporation of British Columbia, to the receiver in bankruptcy, was held by the courts to be too late, and the petition for assignment was dismissed.

On behalf of the creditor firm, W. A. Macdonald & Co., Ltd., a petition for the appointment of a receiver to administer the affairs of the logging company, was filed in the Supreme Court of British Columbia on July 23. The petition was supported by a statement of affairs showing that the company was unable to pay its debts as they came due.

On behalf of the Channel Logging Company, H. A. Maclean, K.C., urged that the petition for assignment be dismissed, as it was filed after the company had been placed in receivership by the courts.

The court, in its decision, held that the petition for assignment was filed too late, and that the company's affairs should continue to be administered by the receiver.

MANY CHURCH SERVICES

Mexico City, July 29.—The daylight hours have proved insufficient to accommodate all the Roman Catholic worshippers who are crowding the churches throughout Mexico in anticipation of the suspension on Sunday next of ceremonies conducted by priests, the church authorities have decided to keep the churches open until 10 o'clock each night for the remainder of the week.

NO COUNTER MOVES

The conviction prevails that clashes may be averted Sunday by reason of the decision of the Roman Catholic authorities to refuse to sanction any counter-demonstration to the parade of the United States Confederation of Labor.

Unless entirely unforeseen conditions arise, all the churches will remain open Sunday, although no priests will perform functions. It is estimated that throughout Mexico there are between 20,000 and 25,000 priests in the 12,000 churches, ministering to probably 10,000,000 parishioners.

ORIENTAL MOVES ARE DISCUSSED

Williamstown, Mass., July 29.—Reassurance against the so-called "Yellow Peril" was voiced by Sir Frederick White at a dinner of the Institute of Politics here to-day.

White, who was head of the Indian Legislative Assembly from 1920 to 1925, spoke on the political situation in the Orient.

"The Oriental awakening is a new incentive to progress for us rather than a cause for alarm in terms of material power," he asserted. "If the gauntlet of a challenge were thrown at our feet, the fleets of Britain and the United States would see that the issue was decided in one way alone while a conquest of Europe by land and sea was impossible."

LOSS AT BIMINI

Miami, Fla., July 29.—The havoc wrought by the tropical hurricane at Bimini was described to-day after the arrival here of the storm-battered yacht, the Ilia. Her commander, Captain G. F. Grey, and Captain R. M. Hutchins stated practically all structures on the island were demolished.

The Zuleika limped into port early to-day with seventeen passengers on board. Many were bruised by flying coconuts, which they said fell like rain from the trees into the small harbor, tearing holes in the craft's superstructure.

COMICAL FEATURE
LATE WEEK'S RUN

The Metropolitan picture, "The Million Dollar Handicap," coming to the Columbia Theatre to-day, incorporates many features new to picture tales of the turf.

Chief among the radical departures was Norman McLeod, "gag" man from the Christie Comedy studio, and the artist who draws the gag figures that adorn the sub-titles of Christie comedies. As "gag" man, it was his job to make the laughs flow frequently in "The Million Dollar Handicap."

fell in alphabetically abreast of Jack McDermott, the director. A Rhodes Scholar at Oxford, and a former student at the University of Washington and at McGill, McLeod had never heard of a "gag" man. After the war he became McDermott's assistant at the Christie Studio, and a month later began illustrating sub-titles. Although many "gag" men have earned college degrees, McLeod is the first Rhodes Scholar to enter the field of laugh-making.

The most unusual departure of all, says Vera Reynolds, the leading lady, is the sequence where McLeod suggested that she ride Roscoe, a bucking mule. Expecting a pampered leading woman, director Scott Sidney called upon the assistant camera man to ride Roscoe to show that he was tame. Roscoe cast a malignant eye on the assistant camera man and threw him for a fade-out.

HUSBAND DISCOVERS
TRIPLETS AT HOME
TO WELCOME RETURN

Jack Cassidy and Ruth Hamilton, playing husband and wife in the Ed. Redmond production, "Baby Mine," at the Coliseum this week give a particularly pleasing performance. Jack is a hen-pecked husband at the "beck and call" of his wife and her friend Zoie (Gertrude Burton). Much to Jack's disgust he is called upon to borrow, steal or rent a baby for the purpose of reconciling Zoie with her husband (George Olsen) and accomplishes the job so thoroughly that, on the return of the prodigal husband, that happy man finds himself the "father" of triplets.

PLAY INTERLUDE TO

This week at the Dominion Theatre the management are offering an exceptional interesting programme. The first item is Gilda Grey in "Alma of the South Seas," a fiery romance of the South Seas island beauty and a derelict white man.

The scenic shots in the production are outstanding. Maurice Tourneur, who had directed many fine film successes handled the megaphone. Percy Marmont and Warner Baxter have the supporting roles with Miss Grey. The balance of the cast is of a high order.

Musical lovers will have a treat in store for them this week, when the Ahivela Hawaiian String Trio will make their first appearance. In addition to the regular feature presentation, their programme will include many native Hawaiian compositions, and should prove to be quite an enjoyable musical attraction, the Dominion News and Comedy complete this big bill.

Valentino Adopts
Belligerent Pose

Entirely new angle on the late Sir Rider Haggard, and will show at the Capitol Theatre all this week.

Betty Blythe and Carlyle Blackwell have the leading roles, and the supporting cast is of an exceptionally high calibre throughout. Betty's interpretation of the famous African beauty in "She" is said to surpass almost anything this popular star has ever done.

The scenic effects in this great English attraction are little short of marvelous, and prove beyond a doubt that British productions are making fast progress.

DECLINE OF AUSTRIAN HOUSE IS SUBJECT OF PLAYHOUSE SHOWING

How Austrian families, with generations of traditions behind them and empty cupboards before them, were humbled, while war barons and war vultures grew fat on the profits of the war, is brought poignantly to light in one of the season's most unusual screen dramas, "The Greater Glory," which is shown at the Playhouse Theatre.

The Greater Glory is the work of June Mathis. Miss Mathis is responsible for "The Four Horsemen," which brought Rex Ingram and Rudolph Valentino to the fore.

More than a year ago, spent on the production of "The Greater Glory." The picture is an adaptation of "Viennese Medley," the celebrated novel by Edith S. Hughes, widow of the American ambassador at Vienna.

The story is a poignant history of the fortunes of an old Viennese family before, during and after the war. The picture is startlingly realistic. The greater part of the scenes recorded are authentic and actually took place in the once gay Austrian capital.

The large cast of "The Greater Glory" is headed by Anna Q. Nilsson, Conway Tearle, May Allison, Ian Keith, Jean Hersholt and Larry Beau-mont. More than twenty other players of note have supporting parts, and the "extra" parts number about 1,600.

Curt Rehfeld directed. This is his first picture, although he has been intimately associated with the films for more than ten years.

So he says, does Shellie Rudolph Valentino, arriving in New York on urgent business, but ready to hasten back to Chicago with the speed of the wind if he can get his challenge accepted. His challenge—you know—to the editor who wrote a scurrilous editorial captioning him "Pink Powder Puffs."

"He blacks my manhood, my country, my family name. It is too much," snorts the flappers' idol and thinks his silver slave bracelets continuously.

So here we have Signor Valentino in fighting mood, and in fighting trim, stripped for action, and cursed be he who first cries "Hold! Enough!"

Metchozin, July 29.—News has been received that Mr. Ellwood of Waldron, near Melville, Sask., father of Len Ellwood, until recently residing with relatives in the town, who was severely injured in the tornado which wrecked the home and killed his wife, died of his injuries on Sunday last. The children, who all but one were also injured, are recovering.

MARIE PREVOST IS
STAR IN DOMINION
FILM NEXT WEEK

That Marie Prevost, one of the most sparkling personalities of the screen, was an ideal choice for stardom in "Up in Mabel's Room," is evident from the hundreds of letters received by her from fans since this feature was filmed. Miss Prevost's following, which has grown steadily from bathing girl days through such pictures as "Robbed Nerve," "The Marriage Circle," "The Beautiful and Damned" and "The Dark Swan," will undoubtedly be greatly augmented by her appearance at the Dominion Theatre next week in "Up in Mabel's Room." Harrison Ford and Phyllis Haver are featured.

PICTURE COMPANY
HIRES RUM CRAFT
IN MAKING FILM

Involuntarily, Warner Bros. present in their production of "Oh! What a Nurse!" coming to the Playhouse next week, starring Syd Chaplin, an actual rum-running speed boat. Involuntarily, because it was not known until their engagement was terminated that the speed boat which they had hired was a rum-runner.

There was a very thrilling sequence in "Oh! What a Nurse!" and a very fast speedboat was needed for certain scenes in it. This particular one was recommended as being one of the fastest obtainable, it was hired. One day, toward the end of the work, one of its crew of two began boasting of its merits to one of the chaplain company. It was new, obsolete, but it had been at the time the fastest rum-runner on the coast. It was captured and confiscated by the government and resold for legitimate use. He was to explain how every so often the craft had made a 130-mile trip out to sea where it met a schooner loaded with liquor, at some bank on the shore. It had carried 130 cases of liquor at a load.

New York, July 29.—The cauliflowering of a pink ear, the rumpling of patent leather jackets, the ballooning of a delicate nose—such calamities are as nothing when the warm blood of a sheik reaches the boiling point.

COLWOOD

Colwood, July 29.—The Colwood Women's Institute exhibit in the Victoria Fall Fair bids fair to be a very attractive one, as was evidenced by the report of the committee in charge at a recent special meeting of the institute, and the general enthusiasm of the members exhibiting. Some very attractive collections of art and women's work will form part of the exhibit, and the management of the local fair, to be held at Luxton on September 1, are hoping that part of the exhibit shown in the Victoria fall fair will be used to make up an exhibit to be entered in the Metchozin District Fair.

THESE WOMEN

By MALCOLM DUART

(Copyrighted)

The names and situations in this story are fictitious.

Walking over to Parrish and taking him by the shoulder he terminated the interview.

"You got off cheaply enough—your savings, plus three hundred and seventy-five dollars. It's a low price for a liberal education. Now run along. As the young lady said last night—you're a poor fish, but I think you'll undergo improvement."

Shame-faced, the young man withdrew, closing the door softly behind him.

Morton rubbed his chin reflectively, picked up his open check book and placed it in his desk. He sat with an enigmatic smile, took his hat and stick and passed into the outer hallway.

Nona's company, which had been rehearsing, piecemeal, the chorus in one outlying hall, the principal dancers in another, and the singers in an auditorium maintained by one of the music publishing houses, had gathered for its first rehearsal together. Opening night was only a few days away.

Morton and Audrey were sitting in a box in the darkened theatre. The company was on the stage, talking about the producer, while he talked animatedly to the orchestra.

At last a young man in the orchestra pit banged upon the piano. Principals withdrew into the wings, followed by the chorus. The producer had descended into the orchestra, where he sat beside the pianist.

The overture finished, the chorus danced on to the stage, wheeling at the rear, and lining up before the dimmed footlights.

"Stop!" A shirt-sleeved man ran from the wings. "Go back and do it again. You dance like a bunch of cows!"

The girls retreated and again made their entrance. Once more they were told to withdraw.

The rehearsal started in the early afternoon. It was dark when Audrey and Morton left the theatre. Nona had appeared three times, in her brief practice costume, had done her dances, bowed, and vanished. Still the rehearsal scarcely began.

"Poor thing," sighed Audrey. "How hard they do work!"

"They'll be there until after midnight," Morton told her. "They'll work eighteen hours a day until the show opens."

They were moving across the sidewalk toward their waiting car.

"Daddy," said Audrey, "I want to tell you something."

CHAPTER XLVI

Morton tucked her arm comfortably under his own.

"If we're to have a soul-to-soul confab, suppose we walk."

He dismissed the car, and together they strolled down the side street.

The year had advanced so far that, although the sun had set, it was before it was past their dinner hour.

"Aren't you hungry?" Audrey asked.

"We'll eat when we get home," Morton told her. "What's on your mind?"

The girl walked on with him two score paces or more, before she answered.

Finally she said: "Daddy, there's something wrong with me."

He pressed her arm. "Nonsense! But what do you think is wrong with you?"

"Did you see the girl in the third row of the chorus this afternoon?" she asked him.

"Yes, but what's that got to do with you?"

She went on. "Well, you noticed how serious she was; how the director had to keep on telling her to smile. She was intelligent, too, and pretty. But daddy, that girl was born to be a schoolteacher."

Morton was puzzled. "I'm still waiting," he told her. "What has the girl and schoolteaching and the chorus got to do with you?"

Audrey slowed her pace, as she searched for words. "That girl was mis-cast. Well, I'm mis-cast, too. I'm not in the right place."

He stopped, and placing his hands on her shoulders, turned her around to face him. "Are you unhappy, dear?" There was infinite tenderness in his voice.

She shook her head. He dropped his hand, and again taking her arm beneath his, walked on.

"I'm not unhappy," she told him. "But my life has been an odd one. It seems to me I'm not doing the things I'm fitted for."

"I know," he said. "I've been selfish. Except when you were away at school, I've kept you with me all ways. It was because I loved you, and was trying to make you happy."

What I should have done was to throw you into the company of young folk, of your own age. You would have gone out and danced, and played around, and by this time there would have been a young man in your life for whom you wanted to make a home."

She moved both hands to his coat sleeve, and hung heavily upon him.

"You're wrong, daddy," she said. "No young man in the world could mean half so much to me as you do. But I ought to be a housekeeper making a home. As it is, you make the home for me. You attend to hiring the servants, and you buy everything that is needed, and there isn't one blessed thing that I do that's a parasite—or a fungus! You're the big sturdy tree, and I'm just the fungus that doesn't do the tree any good at all!"

He laughed.

"An orchid is a fungus, you know," he said.

"I'd rather be a cabbage," she retorted promptly. "At least, you can eat a cabbage, and it is of some benefit. You can only wear an orchid."

They turned the corner into their own street.

"I don't do you any good," she added.

He pointed to a street lamp that hung at the corner. "That electric globe does not give me food, nor shelter, nor clothing. But it lights my way, when it is dark."

Freedom of the passers-by, he placed his arm around her for a moment. "You light my way, sweetheart—the world would be mighty dark without you."

Releasing his arm, he resumed, gaily: "But I'll let you hire the servants, and pay their wages, if you want to. How's that?"

She nodded soberly. "That would help—I could keep an account book, and everything."

In little eager sentences, she discussed the problems of housekeeping from the viewpoint of one who knows nothing about them, until they reached the apartment. The butler, as he opened the door for them, motioned toward the drawing-room.

Mr. Parrish waiting for you, sir."

Parrish arose to meet them as they stepped into the room. His eyes moved anxiously from Audrey to her guardian, and back. Reassured by their pleasant greeting, he smiled.

"I didn't mean to intrude for dinner," he said. "I just brought my guitar. I wonder if I could play for you?" he asked, turning to Audrey.

"Sit down and practice until we have a bite of food," Morton said. "Have you eaten?"

Parrish said he had dined. He retreated into the organ alcove as Morton and Audrey left him, and as they prepared for dinner, he plucked upon his instrument.

"There's something useful for you to do," Morton proposed. "That boy's just too. He wants to be a good scout. I think he really is one. He used to be so stiff, and opinionated—now I'm afraid the props are all knocked from under him. You might try guiding his feeble footsteps, for a while."

Audrey balanced her soup spoon, contemplatively.

"I think he acted dreadfully, with those chorus girls," she said.

"He's through with that," Morton surmised.

He told her of his adventure with Parrish in the Bon Cabaret, and of his conversation with the young man in his office, the following morning.

"Everyone of us takes the wrong path, sometimes," he concluded. "We're lucky if we have one to yank us back."

Later, in the drawing-room, Audrey exerted herself to make the evening pleasant for her visitor. She played for him, and sang to him, and listened gravely while he performed upon his guitar, to Morton's accompaniment on the organ.

After an hour, Morton left them, and retreated into his study.

He looked back before he closed the door. Parrish's face, radiant with happiness, was beamed over the instrument upon which he was strumming.

Audrey was hiding a yawn behind her hand.

Nona's show had opened.

The chattering crowd that had applauded it was pouring into the street. Back in the newspaper offices the dramatic critics, who had left just before the finale, were writing that the production was an assured success.

BEDTIME STORY

Uncle Wiggly's Spare Tire

Copyright, 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

By HOWARD R. GARIS

"Here," said the Fussy Fox to the White Wolf one day, "is the bottle of ink."

"That doesn't mean anything to me," growled the White Wolf, who was a cousin to the Woolly Wolf.

He sat in his den trying to keep cool, and the Fox had come over to see him with a bottle of the black stuff.

"I didn't ask you to bring me any ink," went on the Wolf.

"Well, it's like this. With this ink you will blacken your fur until you are the color of Uncle Wiggly's spare tire. You will curl yourself up inside the tire and ride behind the rabbit's car without him knowing it. At a lonesome spot in the woods the car will stop. Uncle Wiggly will get off to put on his spare tire and that you and I will grab him. How's that for a trick?"

"It sounds good," said the White Wolf, "but how do you know Uncle Wiggly will stop his car in a lonely spot to take off the spare tire?"

"He will have to stop there because he will have a puncture," answered the Fox.

"How can you be sure he will get a puncture?" the Wolf asked.

"I will make sure of it by scattering some sharp tacks in the road at that spot," snapped the Fox. "Say no more, but ink yourself and get ready to do your part as I'll do mine."

So the Wolf put black ink on his white fur until he looked the color of a black spare tire on the back of an auto.

Then, watching his chance, the bad chap curled up inside the circle of the tire and waited for Uncle Wiggly to come out of his hollow stump bungalow to go riding.

The Wolf, who was now black instead of white, did not have long to wait.

Soon out hopped the bunny, his pink nose twinkling happily, and into his auto he jumped. The Fox had run on ahead with a paper of sharp tacks, which he was to scatter in the road at a lonely spot.

"It looks as if it would rain soon," said Uncle Wiggly to himself as he started his car. "But I don't care. I have my umbrella top up. I can't get wet."

So away he drove, as the Fox knew he would, for the bad chap had listened at an open window the night before and heard Nurse Jane tell the rabbit gentleman to bring her some carrots the next day. To get carrots Uncle Wiggly had to drive along the lonely road.

Well, of a sudden it began to rain. It rained very hard, and when Uncle Wiggly reached the lonely spot in the road, all of a sudden he heard a loud hissing noise.

"That's either a snake or a puncture," said the rabbit as he stopped his car and got out to look, and, surely enough it was a puncture. "Somebody has been scattering tacks in the road," said the rabbit as he saw them. "I wish the Police Dog was here. Well, it's lucky I have a spare tire."

Uncle Wiggly hopped around the back of his car to get the spare tire, and the Fox, who was hiding in the bushes, thought this was now the Police Dog's chance. But as the rabbit looked he cried:

"Oh, what's that white beast curled up in my spare tire? It's a White Wolf! Ho! I'll run and get the Police Dog!" And without stopping to take off the spare tire, Uncle Wiggly ran away as fast as he could,

For the rain had washed all the black ink off the Wolf—do you see?—leaving him white as he should be. And the bunny saw the bad chap quite plainly before going too near.

"Fooled again!" growled the Fox, jumping out from behind the bush. "And all on account of the rain. Come on, Wolf, before the Police Dog gets here to arrest us!"

So the bad chap ran away, and when the Police Dog came back with Uncle Wiggly he helped change the tire, so it all happened for the best. And if the gas stove doesn't go to the movies all by itself and leave the tea kettle home alone, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggly's toothache plant.

The Wolf put black ink on his white fur.

"I brought it without being asked," laughed the Fox.

"What's the joke?" the Wolf wanted to know.

"The joke is going to be on Uncle Wiggly," went on the Fox, "but the ink is going to be on you."

"I never was very good at guessing riddles," spoke the Wolf.

"It's like this," explained the Fox.
